SCHOOL CHILDREN

were very pleasantly entertained yesterday by the pupils of Miss Conway's intermediate classes. The excellent instrumental music endered was one of the most interesting features of the occasion. Mrs. Fitts has reason to be proud of her pupils. Miss Greenwood sang, and her rich, clear, beautiful voice gained new laurels for her. Among the pupils we cannot forbear mentioning a the pupils we cannot forbear mentioning a few whose recitations were very far beyond the average and reflected the highest credit upon themselves and their teachers: "Reubenstein Criticized," by Patty Hammond; "Hunting a House," by Hattie Hirsch;" "The Curfew," by Hennie Smith; "Paul Revere's Ride," by Mary Clayton; "The Young Gray Head," by Julia Karr; "Shamus O'Brien," by Josie Daley; "Woman's Rights," by Fannie Haughton, Prizes were awarded as follows: For elecution, Hennie Smith as follows: For elecution, Hennie Smith and Ruby Behr; perfect conduct, Olie Rogers and Hennie Smith; highest examination average, Mary Berry, Hattie Hirsch, Mary Donohue, Saloma Muller and Annie Davis. The composition prize in Miss Lewellyn's room was awarded to Mildred O. Mathes. The school will close with the graduating exercises on Friday next. In the afternoon a music-loving audience attended Mrs. Fitts's examination in theory and practice. The pupils were required to put upon the board the analysis of the major keys, with their relative minor keys; the formation of the chords of each tone of the scale, and transpo-sition. Marks of expression, time and all the difficult technique of music were reviewed, showing that the pupils were being thorough-ly trained in all that pertains to harmony. Brilliant solos were executed by Jesse Trask, Mollie Barrow and Minnie Hannah, but the most interesting part of the programme was a beautiful reverie by Mrs. Fitts, composed for the occasion, and dedicated to her pupils. In reply to an enthusiastic encore, she played her own arrangement of Esmett's Lullaby. The first prize was awarded to Lilly Stratton and the second to Hattie Turner. Mrs. Fitts will return in September with a corps of teachers, prepared to open a conservatory. We wish her the success she deserves. LOCAL PARAGRAPHS.

SEVEN GIPSIES

Brutal New York. NEW YORK, June 23,-The Tribune says The central attraction at Castle Garden yes-terday was a family of seven Gipsies, natives of Hungary, who arrived in the steam-ship Assyrian Monarch, from London. They came to this country intending to live an ex-posed life on the prairies, and hoped to be able to obtain an existence through copper and tinsmithing and by fortuneand tinsmithing and by fortune-telling. They were dressed in the Hungarian costume, and they brought with them a Russian wagon, in which was stored what little clothing they possessed, their cooking utensils, tents and poles. Their horse was sold in London. After their arhorse was sold in London. After their arrival they expressed a desire to purchase a horse, and Superintendent Jackson cantioned them against being swindled, when the woman replied: "Any one who can swindle me with a horse is at liberty to do so." After purchasing a horse in Jersey City for twenty-five dollars they started on their journey westward. Not many miles from New York they were stoned by ruffians, and found it necessary to heat a ruffians, and found it necessary to beat a hasty retreat. Yesterday, they said they would not remain there, but would appeal to the Consul for assistance to return to their native land. They were offered thirty dollars a week by the proprietor of one of the Bowery museums to go on exhibition, which
